Byte-Sized Pedagogy for AI Integration

Week 12: The Human Manifesto

As the semester winds down, let's celebrate what WE bring to the table! The Human Manifesto is an activity where students show off the skills no AI can touch. This is their opportunity to highlight things like empathy, real-world judgment, and personal experience. Ask your students to write a short "Human Value Add" statement explaining exactly how their unique human perspective made their project better than anything an AI could generate. This confidence booster highlights why your human students will be essential in the modern workforce. Find the "Human Value Add" worksheet on our Faculty AI Resource Site and make your final weeks a celebration of human agency.

LASSI Lesson: Connecting to Previous Knowledge

LASSI
Learning And Study Strategies Inventory
Lehigh Carbon COMMUNITY COLLEGE

The Information Processing measure of the Learning and Study Skills Inventory (LASSI) assesses students' self-reported ability to use images, verbal expression, organization, and reasoning as learning strategies. Among the 510+ students who took the LASSI in Fall 2025, this measure ranked among the highest (49.45 vs. the national norm).

Notably, many students endorsed the statement, "I try to find relationships between what I am learning and what I already know" (Q3). Connecting new material to prior knowledge is a well-established best practice in learning.

Faculty already provide strong examples, but they should also encourage students to create their own, connecting course material to personal experience. We recall examples tied to our own lives more easily than those from others. LCCC tutors in Educational Support Services (ESS) are valuable resources to help students make these connections.

Next week, we'll share another insight. Questions? Thoughts? Contact Michael Spinks and Katy DeLong at thelassi@lccc.edu.

Psychology Club Book Drive

Do you have any books that you haven't read in years? Are you hoping to spread the joy of reading to others? If you'd like to support literacy in our campus community, please consider dropping off your books at any of the campus locations. There are boxes in the Community Services Center, Academic Resource Center Cafeteria, Berrier Hall, the Student Union, the Student Services Center, and the Rothrock Library! The book collection will continue until Wednesday, May 6.

If you're interested in browsing the selection of books for yourself, join the Psychology Club and the Library on Thursday, May 7, in the lobby of the Rothrock Library! We'll have a variety of books you can take for your family and friends, activities during the event, and art kits you can take home.

While you're attending, you can support the Senior Capstone projects of our very own LCCC students in the Glass Box Gallery from 6 – 8 p.m.

All leftover books will be donated to the Rothrock Library for their Take-a-Book, Add-a-Book program!

Byte-Sized Pedagogy for AI Integration

Week 11: The Transparency Log

As we acclimate to a world of higher education increasingly shaped by AI, it is vital to move from "policing" AI to documenting its use. The Transparency Log is a simple data sheet where students declare exactly how AI contributed to their final project (brainstorming, grammar checks, data organization, etc.) This practice mirrors emerging professional standards, where disclosure is a mark of integrity rather than an admission of guilt. By normalizing transparency, we reduce the "fear of getting caught" and replace it with a culture of honest, guided innovation. Visit our Faculty AI Resource Site for a "Disclosure Checklist" that students can attach to their final submissions.

Katy DeLong, Ph.D., Associate Professor, Psychology
Michael G. Spinks, Ed.D., Associate Professor, Learning Specialist

Last Thursday, April 16th, Dr. Katy DeLong, Associate Professor of Psychology, Dr. Michael G. Spinks, Learning Specialist, and Jess Joseph-Arms (in spirit) presented at PA_NOSS, the Pennsylvania Chapter of the National Organization for Student Success at Shippensburg University.

The well-attended session, entitled "Lessons from Launching the LASSI: How Expanding the Learning and Study Skills Inventory at a Community College Really Went," told our LASSI story so far here at LCCC. The LASSI team shared our successes and challenges, and we also presented new findings, including statistically significant trends emerging from the data. The team received great feedback, inspired others to use the LASSI, and received suggestions for using the LASSI and its results here at LCCC.

We want to thank everyone at LCCC for supporting our presentation and this LASSI innovation we are engaging in at LCCC. Next week, we will get back to sharing LASSI data insights. For LASSI questions, contact Michael and Katy at thelassi@lccc.edu.
